Naples, July 8

My very dear Father and my very dear Mother, I will be glad that Your Majesties are still good. Me and my wife are fine, thank God...

...between the time it took her to undress and comb her hair, it was time for dinner and I couldn't do anything, even though I really wanted to. We went to bed at nine and we both trembled, but we started kissing and I was ready right away, and I started and after a quarter of an hour I broke her, and this time we couldn't spill either of us; I will only say that about what they told me that as she was young and delicate they did not doubt that she would make me sweat, I will say that the first time I ran the sweat like a fountain but since then I have not sweated.

Later, at three in the morning, I started over and we spilled both at the same time and since then we have continued like this, twice a night, except that night when we were supposed to come here, since we had to get up at four in the morning. I was only able to do it once in the morning and I assure you that I could have done it many more times but that I put up with it for the reasons that Your Majesties they gave me.

I will also say that we always spill at the same time because one waits for the other and also that she is the most beautiful girl in the world and that she has the spirit of an angel and the best mood and that I am the happiest man in the world having this woman who she has to be my partner for the rest of my life.

Your Majesties told me that they were waiting impatiently to find out if they could have grandchildren but that they were afraid that she would not be right away, since she does not have her period yet. I will tell Your Majesties that she still does not have it, but that according to all appearances, she will not take long to have it because she began 4 nights ago to leave some stains of that matter that say that she precedes having her period; which I hope in God, in the Virgin and in Saint Anthony.

Maria Josepha Amalia of Saxony (1803 – 1829)

"Enter his Majesty. Imagine a fat man with the appearance of a satyr, very dark, with his lower lip hanging down. According to the lady for whom the story is told, his virile member is thin as a sealing wax bar at the base, and as fat as his fist at the end of it; plus, as long as a billiard cue. He is, moreover, the rudest and most shameless scoundrel in his kingdom. Faced with this horrible sight, the Queen believed she was fading, and it was much worse when her Catholic Majesty began to fondle her recklessly, and the queen escapes from the bed and runs around the room screaming. The King pursues her; but since she is young and agile, and the King is fat, heavy, and gouty, the Monarch fell on his nose, tripped on the ground. In short, the king found that game very foolish and flew into a dreadful rage.

He calls, asks for his sister-in-law and the old waitress, and treats them of whores and brutes with an eloquence very typical of him, and finally orders them to prepare the Queen, leaving them a quarter of an hour for that business. Later, he walks, in shirt and slippers, through a gallery smoking a cigar. I don't know what the hell those women said to the Queen; the truth is that they made her so afraid that her digestion was disturbed. When the King returned and wanted to resume the conversation at the point where he had left it, she found no resistance; but, at her first effort to open a door, she naturally opened the other one and stained the sheets with a very different scent from what is expected after a wedding night. He left swearing and spent eight days without wanting to touch his royal wife”
